Gentlemen

A Persian is showing a coin what appears to be a decadrachm of Eukratides, King of Bactria, (Silver) it has the appearance of a genuine coin but as I never seen the like of it before I am at a loss what to do about it. Can you tell me what the weight of such a coin ought to be and its approximate value. The coin is in good condition, well struck on a nearly round planchet.

I have to day returned the Roman coins with thank for what I bought by express.

Gentlemen.

Yours of June 20 received and thank you for your kindness. As regards the Baltican Coin would say that it is like No 32. Plate 52. (B.V. Head, Greek Coins) and weighs 1830 grains, or 3 oz. 16¼ dwgt. So you see it is a remarkable coin if it is O.K. The man says he has an offer of $40 for it but he expects a much larger price but I can not get him to name a figure at which he will sale it. Any additional advice or information on this subject will be very much appreciated
